All the features of the app are things you could easily do by exchanging phone numbers and calling & texting, or Discord, or ANY number of apps and chat rooms you have on your phone ALREADY. This app doesn't really add anything to the Switch... the ONLY feature that MIGHT be useful is inviting friends to games, which often isn't there! THIS APP SHOULD NOT EXIST, ITS LITERALLY POINTLESS.

It's as good as worthless unless, by chance, both of you are playing the same game online and are also using the Switch app. It needs an option to message or call your Switch friends

A nice little companion app for the Nintendo Switch. If you don't play games with online components (i.e. Splatoon, visiting friends in Animal Crossing), this may not do much for you. But if you do play such games, you may as well download it because it does have some cool stuff.

Desperately needs a overhaul and new features. This far into the Switch's life, we should have been able to message our friends, have game hubs, use voice chat from the console instead of the app, and over more features for a paid subscription. The Xbox app for example, has a ton of features in such a small package, and doesn't even require Xbox Live Gold to get any real use out of.

I love using this app to communicate with friends while playing Smash Ultimate or Animal Crossing

I've downloaded a lot of awful apps in the past, but this is objectively the most useless app I've even downloaded. There are various apps that allows voice chat already, there could've been so many features that made this interesting. There could've been a feature that let us edit our profiles, check playtime and stats for certain games, and most importantly chat with or add friends when we don't have our switches with us. This app is just...useless.

The Splatoon specific service is fine, and the one coming out for smash looks like it will be nice. I do wish that this app could let you do more however. Normally Nintendo is nice because they always include the small extra details. This app is very much the opposite of that. You aren't getting extra

THINKS

This lame app doesn't even have the bare minimum features (e.g., eShop) of other game console apps, like Xbox or PlayStation's

I know it's not very cool to just keep buying Mario and Zelda games but games are expensive now and I know I can always enjoy those when new ones come out

There's no reason to ever download the app. Nintendo doesn't offer anything either useful or fun on it and I hate having a hundred apps on my phone

I remember Nintendo being a more exciting and fun brand when I was younger. Remember when everyone's minds were blown by the Wii?

I don't have a lot of time in my life for gaming now so I don't even know what new games are good out there

It seems like all of my guy friends have PlayStations, maybe I should switch over to Sony next time

DOES

I prefer playing Switch plugged into TV

Because I don't have a lot of time for games, I usually only buy 1-2 games a year

If there's a new title coming out for a series that I love, I will make time to play on my Switch more often

I typically only play for about 20-40 min a night after work

If there's a legacy Nintendo IP coming out, I'm hyped- my friends and I will all go out and get the newest release

I downloaded it when I first bought my Switch but I haven't opened the app in forever bc there's no reason to

Sometimes I still buy old fashioned physical copies of games but I'm increasingly buying digital ones. Then I can just download it the day something I want comes out

FEELS

Regret: I want to have more online friend features for gaming but tbh it's difficult to coordinate my schedule with my friends' now

Impatient: I've tried using the voice chat thing on the app and it was glitchy

Nostalgia: I wish I could recapture the magic of what it felt like to play Nintendo games when I was younger- and had more time

Frustration: I'm used to putting up with some inconveniences as a Nintendo fan but I'm increasingly not being rewarded for my loyalty

Disappointed: I've been a Nintendo fan since I was a kid and I expect way more cool and fun perks from them
